Photos and information courtesy of Star Roses and Plants

Drift® Roses are a cross between full-size groundcover roses and miniatures. From the groundcover roses they kept toughness, disease resistance and winter hardiness. From the miniatures, they inherited a well-managed size and repeat-blooming nature. The low, spreading habit of Drift® Roses is perfect for small gardens and combination planters. They brighten borders, fill empty spaces, and spread delicately around established plants. They are recommended for slopes, planted 30" apart, will grow to fill in areas with a mass of color. Planted in groups, they can give a bold splash of color at the entrance to the garden. Their spreading nature helps suppress weeds.

Drift® Roses are low maintenance and will reward you with endless color all season long. They require no special care, but for best performance, we recommend cutting them back every year in early spring after the last threat of frost has passed.

Winter protection is recommended. Four weeks before the last expected frost, discontinue pruning and fertilizing. If the soil is dry, water thoroughly as the roses will still need moisture. Once they are dormant, add 2 -3" of mulch around the base of the plant (you may need more if you are further north). They also recommend some wind protection if your roses are prone to wind damage over the winter.
